Humanitarian

Daniel D. Palmer a Founder of Chiropractic has rightly said "The most wonderful study of mankind is man. Relieving human suffering and diffusing universal knowledge is humanitarian." Martin Luther King a Civil Rights Activist has said "Life's most persistent and urgent question is, 'What are you doing for others?'"

As humanitarian workers deliver aid, and medical workers treat the wounded and sick, they are directly targeted, treated as threats, and prevented from bringing relief and care to those in desperate need. These workers often battle violence, local diseases and hunger while attempting to save lives and provide relief to those most in need. Killings, kidnappings and attacks are daily risks in a world where 80% of humanitarian aid is being delivered to civilians caught up by conflict. On this day, it is imperative to remember thousands of humanitarian workers who are risking their lives to try to deliver assistance to those suffering the effects of terrible conflicts. The world should show zero tolerance to those in conflicts who flagrantly fail to respect and protect humanitarian workers in accordance with international humanitarian law.

WHD is an opportunity to celebrate the spirit of people helping people. The day is dedicated to recognizing those who face danger and adversity to help others, regardless of who they are and where they are. Despite all the money and aid that is being given for humanitarian relief, it is still estimated that one-third of all global humanitarian needs are not being met. By helping others, many people sacrifice their most precious possession: their life. Everyone can be a humanitarian. People affected by disasters are often the first to help their own communities following a disaster. Responding to emergencies is only one aspect of humanitarian work.

For decades humanitarianism has captured and shaped the dreams of the populations of the global North, dreams of a better world, of a common humanity, of goodness, of solidarity, and of global healing. Attacks on humanitarian workers hinder the ability of people in desperate need to receive lifesaving assistance. WHO has a specific mandate to protect the human right to health, especially for people affected by humanitarian emergencies. let us honour the heroic aid workers who rush bravely to help people in need. It's a day to pay tribute to those who help the world's most vulnerable people and to redouble efforts to provide emergency aid to global victims of crises. Let us remember their sacrifices, and recognise the millions of people who count on humanitarian workers for their very survival. Let us honour the fallen by protecting those who carry on their work - and supporting humanitarian relief operations worldwide.

The heart of a father is the masterpiece of nature

Father's Day was celebrated worldwide to recognize the contribution that fathers and father figures make to the lives of their children. It is a day that intends to recognize us the struggle and contributions of fathers and the difference they make to the lives of the children. One thing is clear that father's Day helps children come closer to their father. Really, this day celebrates fatherhood and male parenting in true sense. Father's day is almost around the corner and it actually is the reminder of all those ecstasy and happiness that we share with our father. Parenting is not an easy task. That is why fathers are celebrated on this day for the wonderful job that they are doing as parents. It is nice to celebrate Father's Day or a Mother's Day and make our parents feel important and special. Our actions go a long way in making our children understand about caring and bonding. A father's contribution in his child's life is tremendous, and this day seeks to celebrate his presence. The day eulogizes all father figures which includes fathers, grandfathers and forefathers and extol their numerous sacrifices and impart moral values. Our father helped us to develop wings of imagination and he gave us the courage of realizing them in life. We derive our strength and courage from our father. Today, there is a greater awareness of Fathers Day events in our metropolitan cities and bigger towns due to the greater exposure of people to the western cultures. We all have observed that fathers come in all shapes and sizes but one thing they have in common is a heart big enough to encompass every smile and every tear, every joy and every fear in their child's life. I would like to share that father's Day gives me a chance to express how truly blessed I am to have you as my father. He strives very hard for the family. For the world, he is a man of clean habits and a hard worker. Everyone is aware that all fathers invest themselves completely and ask for nothing in return. The father, a teacher, a preacher, a healer, thousands of roles he plays in our life.

When we give a gift to our parents, they understand the joy in giving. When we feel happy that our parents are happy, they learn the richness of our culture. Fathers set examples for their children by doing hard work and accomplishing big feats, yet know how to keep calm during tough times. It is the unconditional love and support that makes the bond strong. The importance of discipline in life and the resilience to achieve goals are instilled in their children right from the childhood by my father.

I have always heard my father telling me stories about his days when he faced hardship & struggle but never gave up. He told me to have faith in God and work with 100 per cent commitment if I want to be successful in life. Really, I feel, a father's love for his children knows no bounds and this pure love gives immense strength to the children. There are inherent expectations in the father-son relationship. How much do fathers want their sons to be like or unlike them? Let us remember that Father's Day is just a way of telling our father that in his time of need, his son and/or daughter will forever be by his side, no matter what. So let express our thanks to our Great Father. (B-15 Jyoti-Kalash Society, Jodhpur Tekra, Satellite, Ahmedabad - 380 015)

Sarai Amanat Khan: Forgotten Mughal inn that once connected Agra to Lahore

In the recent India-Pakistan hostility, the savage brunt of our adversary nation's assault was most severely felt in border areas. While Amritsar – together with various other places close to the border – was a prime target, there is a little-known place even closer to the border than Amritsar whose inhabitants also spent tense nights.

From the outside, Sarai Amanat Khan looks like a mediaeval fort, and a rather small one at that. Within its fortified walls is a thriving community in a state of agrarian prosperity, similar to other places in Punjab. But no other place in the state has people living permanently in a fort, so a visitor ponders this peculiarity. It is certainly not on account of being close to the international border. To know the answer, a dive into history is needed.

In the Mughal era, this place lay on the road that connected Lahore with Delhi, Agra and beyond. The route saw continuous movement of merchant caravans, marching armies and even the imperial family. The long road was punctuated by caravan sarais, meant for weary travellers to spend a night in. Sleeping in the open was fraught with danger, and wealthy merchants paid a toll to spend a night within the guarded confines verses carved on the gateway of Akbar's tomb at Sikandra and in a caravan sarai in Agra. His greatest claim to glory came when he became the calligrapher of the Taj Mahal, literally carving his name into history at the greatest Mughal monument of all time.

The rewards that followed were in proportion to his work – the title of 'Amanat Khan', which translates into 'like an heirloom', along with a jagir and rights to the caravan sarai on a key highway route. The title rubbed off on the sarai as well, and thus 'Sarai Amanat Khan' came into being.

Built like a regular sarai, the structure has two gateways, allowing merchant caravans to enter through one and leave from the other. What looks like a fort from the outside had cells within for travellers to stay, as well as a stepwell, some regular wells and a mosque. However, a caravan sarai owned by the calligrapher of the Taj could not be pedestrian. Both its gateways still bear signs of elaborate tile work, floral and geometric patterns and, most significantly, calligraphy. As per some accounts, some of the glazed tiled calligraphy seen here was personally designed by the master himself. Historians also say that the caravan sarai held special significance for Amanat Khan. The reason for this is attributed to his emotional state following the death of his beloved brother Azal Khan in 1640. Apparently, Amanat Khan put his heart and soul into the design and embellishment of the caravan sarai which bore his name. It was the last flicker of his brilliant candle, and he himself passed away in 1644-45 at the sarai and was buried there itself. Around the same time, Amanat Khan also built his brother's tomb in Agra, the exquisite Chini-ka-Rauza, on the banks of the Yamuna.

Sarai Amanat Khan remained an important place as long as the Mughal empire itself was powerful. As the empire ebbed – a process

Mitsu, who has been fond of trekking since the age of just 6, also scaled the Pindari Glacier in May 2024. Her parents have been involved in trekking for the last 13 years. Her mother has completed about 15 treks so far and has also successfully completed the Kedarkantha Chadar trek, considered the most difficult in the world. Mitsu had prepared for Everest Base Camp for three months. He paid special attention to mental and physical preparation. During this time, he completely stopped eating outside food and ate home-cooked food. In this trek, which he did in association with the Mountain and Movers group, he completed the difficult 12-day journey by facing difficulties like thin air, loss of appetite, fatigue and severe cold. Mitsu is not only talented in mountaineering but also in other fields.
